2.1 Sociolinguistics

Yule (2005, p.205) state that sociolinguistics is used generally for the study of the relationship between language and society. According to Wardaugh (1986, p.12) Sociolinguistics will concern with investigating the relationship between language and society with the goal of better understanding of the structure of language and how language function in community. And according to (Hudson, 1980, pp.4-5) Sociolinguistics is the study of language in relation to society. And based on Holmes (2001, p. 1) defines, sociolinguistics as a study between language and social. Sociolinguistics are interested in explain why we speak differently in different context, they are concerned with identifying the social functions of language and the way it is used to convey meaning.

Based on the definition above, the writer concluded that sociolinguistics is the study of the relationship between language and society. Sociolinguistics is concerned with investigating the relationships between language and society with the goal being a better understanding of the structure of language and of how languages function in communication; the equivalent goal in the sociology of
