

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

4.1 Conclusion

Principal Takes A Holiday the movie shows us information about psychological phenomenon of two main characters named John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz, especially personality development. This film shows how John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz as the main character develop their personalities to be a responsible person. The first reason why they did that because they want to get something they want. Actions that John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz did were suitable with personality development theory of Carl Rogers. Carl Rogers says "An individual may develop optimally and avoid the previously described outcomes if they experience only "unconditional positive regard" and no conditions of worth develop." The needs for positive regard from others and positive self-regard would match organism evaluation and there would be congruence between self and experience, with full psychological adjustment as a result (Rogers, 1959). In other words, personality theory gives explanation about behavior and the factors that can build someone's personality. One of the factors is appreciation. Appreciation from a person toward another can influence someone's personality to be a better person. The appreciations here are something John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz's want. John Scaduto wants to get back his $10.000 cheque and Franklin Fitz wants to acquainted Ms. Celia Shine, the beautiful teacher in John Scaduto's school.

According to Carl Rogers the writer found that John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz do the same thing in the movie. They develop their personalities to get what they want. They have a goal so they can develop their personalities from the conditions they create. They learn from the conditions so they can make some changes for themselves and other people. They become more responsible for anything they do in their lives. From this analysis the writer can conclude that John Scaduto and Franklin Fitz have a similarity, both of them develop their personalities to gain what they want and they help each other to develop their personalities and to incarnate something they want to get.
