ABSTRACT

Wulandari, Dwi Suci 2012. Language Function Analysis of the Dialog between Two Main Characters in The Kite Runner Novel. Study Program of English, Department of Languages and Literature, Faculty of Culture Studies, University of Brawijaya. Supervisor: Syariful Muttaqin Co-supervisor: Agus Gozali.

Keywords: Discourse Analysis, Language Function, Novel.

Discourse analysis is one of linguistic branches studying the language used for communication, either written or spoken related to form and meaning of sentence. In this study, the writer focuses on analyzing language function in the novel. The Kite Runner is a novel by Khaled Hosseini. The objective of the study is to identify the language functions used by the main characters in The Kite Runner novel by used Jacobson's theory, and the main characters in this novel are Hassan and Amir.

This study is qualitative research since the data collected are in the form of words. The type of this study was about language function of the dialogues between the main characters in The Kite Runner novel. The data sources were taken from The Kite Runner novel from English language version and the data for this study were taken from the dialogues of main characters.

The result of this study shows that there are only four kinds out of six of language functions used in the dialogues between the main characters in The Kite Runner novel: they are referential function, phatic function, conative function and emotive function. The writer find 125 (one hundred twenty five) utterances, divided into four kinds of language functions: emotive function 17 (seventeen) utterances, conative function 22 (twenty two) utterances, referential function 45 (forty five) utterances, and phatic function 48 (forty eight) utterances. The most dominant kind of language function is phatic function which focuses on the contact, channel and social relationship between the speaker and the hearer. This shows that the main characters in this novel have the different characters and social status, Hassan is more enthusiastic for asking many things to Amir who is an educated child.

The writer hopes that this study can contribute a better and deeper understanding on how language functions are used for different purposes of talks in daily life. The writer suggests the future researchers who are interested in conducting a study of discourse analysis to analyze other field's sources such as newspaper and film by using different theories of discourse analysis.

ABSTRAK

Wulandari, Dwi Suci 2012. Analisis Fungsi Bahasa Pada Dialog Antara Dua Pemeran Utama Pada Novel Kite Runner. Program Studi Sastra Inggris, Jurusan Bahasa dan Sastra, Fakultas Ilmu Budaya, Universitas Brawijaya. Pembimbing 1: Syariful Muttaqin Pembimbing II: Agus Gozali.

Kata kunci: Analisis Wacana, Fungsi Bahasa, Novel.

Analisis wacana adalah salah satu cabang linguistik yang mempelajari bahasa yang digunakan untuk komunikasi, baik tertulis atau lisan yang terkait dengan bentuk dan makna dari kalimat. Dalam penulisan ini, penulis fokus pada fungsi bahasa dalam menganalisis di novel. Kite Runner adalah sebuah novel oleh Khaled Hosseini. Tujuan penulisan untuk mengidentifikasi fungsi bahasa yang digunakan oleh karakter utama dalam novel dengan menggunakan teori Jacobson, dan karakter utama dalam novel ini adalah Hassan dan Amir.

Penelitian ini menggunakan pendekatan kualitatif karena data yang dikumpulkan adalah kata-kata. Tipe penelitian ini tentang fungsi bahasa pada dialog antara pemeran utama pada novel Kite Runner. Sumber data yang diambil adalah novel Kite Runner dari versi bahasa Inggris dan data yang diambil adalah dialog antara pemeran utama pada novel.

Hasil dari penulisan ini menunjukkan bahwa hanya ada empat dari fungsi bahasa yang digunakan dalam dialog antara karakter utama dalam novel Kite Runner, yaitu referensial fungsi, phatic fungsi, conative fungsi dan emosional fungsi. Penulis tersebut menemukan 125 (seratus dua puluh lima) ujaran, yang terbagi dalam empat macam fungsi bahasa: fungsi emosional 17 (tujuh belas) ujaran, fungsi conative 22 (dua puluh dua) ujaran, fungsi referensial 45 (empat puluh lima) ujaran dan fungsi phatic 48 (empat puluh delapan) ujaran. dan yang sering digunakan dalam novel ini dari fungsi bahasa adalah fungsi phatic yang berfokus pada kontak dan hubungan sosial antara pembicara dan pendengar. Hal ini menunjukkan bahwa karakter utamanya mempunyai perbedaan sosial, Hassan begitu antusias untuk bertanya tentang apapun kepada Amir karena Amir seorang anak yang berpendidikan.

Penulis berharap bahwa penulisan ini dapat berkontribusi dalam pemahaman yang lebih baik dan lebih pada bagaimana fungsi bahasa digunakan untuk tujuan yang berbeda di kehidupan sehari-hari. Penulis menyarankan pada peneliti selanjutnya yang tertarik dalam melakukan penulisan tentang analisis wacana untuk menganalisa lain data seperti majalah dan film dengan teori yang berbeda dalam menganalisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

First of all, the writer would like to take pleasure in her highest and deepest gratitude to the almighty Allah, for all the blessing, gift and guidance in finishing this thesis entitled “Language Function Analysis in the Dialog between Two Main Characters in the Kite Runner Novel”. Further, the writer also considers that this thesis would not be finished without support, guidance, encouragement and prayer from all the people she loves.

At this moment, the writer would like to give her best appreciation to those who helped her in the completion of her thesis into the person from. First, Syariful Muttaqin, M.A and Agus Gozali, S.Pd as the supervisors who are helpful in assisting encouraging her to finish this thesis. Second, Dra. Endang Sasanti, M.A as the examiners who has given her critics and suggestions which are beneficial, hence the writer could finish her thesis. Third are the lecturers and the staffs of Languages and Literature Department, for their help during the process of completing this thesis.

In addition, the writer would like to send her sincere and deepest gratitude to beloved family. Especially, her father and mother, Zainuri and Marwah, her old sister and old brother, Alief Agustina and Alfie Fardiansyah who have given their best support, prayers, care, patience and endless love to accomplish this thesis and ask forgiveness for all the time that has been spent. Then, thanks to all her family in boarding house of Gajayana 573 and her friends in 2008 of culture studies, especially Afsochul Munyroh, Juliana Rulitasari, Fadjar Malik, Aldila Indra, Trisha Albeniz, Rofiq, Ery Dwi, Fauzizah Ulfa, Nur Lailiyah, Ika Puspitasari, Endah Alvian and all her friends, who cannot mention one by one, who gives the best motivation to be strong and never give up.

Hopefully, this thesis gives a valuable contribution for the English Department Students, Especially, for those who are interested in the same object.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

This chapter contains the background of study, problems of study, the objective of study, and the definition of key term.

1.1 Background of the Study

Language is the system of communication in the world. From language, we know about the cultures and the characteristics of each other. According to Yule (1996, p.6) language as a medium for communication can be used to communicate knowledge, message, and information from one person to another. Therefore, from this declaration, we understand about the importance of language for communicating with other people. Language is one of the sources of knowledge's that could get a lot of other knowledge about the culture and characteristics of a country. Many countries in the world use English as a medium of communication among people in different countries.

Language could be called as discourse, because discourse could be understood in written or spoken language which has the quality of unity. McHoul (cited in Choyimah 2011, p.3) mentions that discourse refers to connected speech or writing occurred at supra-sentential levels. In this statement, we can understand discourse which has many relation from the speech and written of conversation. Cook (1989) defines discourse as a language from communication that has feeling of coherence and meaningfulness. It means that discourse as language for communicating has the meaning. For example, person A said “what time is it?” and person B answer “top nine news, just started”. From this conversation is unconnected in the question and answer, and those utterances has the quality of unity from the meaning. The analyses are seen from the speaker, if the speaker comes from teacher means that he or she asks about the time of subject or courses. But if the speakers come from child who waits of the television’s program, people will know the answer from whom the speaker is. Therefore, from this conversation we know about the importance of the meaning of the utterances. The analysis of language is necessarily analyzed of discourse. Discourse analysis related with language used for communicating. The language which is used has the function and meaning according from the context.

Language function is provided for users to give purpose in position of a communication. It means that the purpose of communication has the function and meaning to clarify the utterances. According to Halliday (1973, p.35), the function of language is to describe how language is used. To achieve this purpose, it can be done through speaking, listening, reading, and writing from what the speaker and listener got. Cook (1989, p.24) defines language function as the function which the sender of a message intends to achieve with it. He points out the function of language should be analyzed by identifying the elements of communication, for example: Addresser/addressor, Addressee, Channel, Message form, Topic and Setting. Jakobson (cited in Cook 1994, p. 39) supposes that language function concern with specifies to which class or types a given unit, such as word, text or image, belongs (like a textual or pictorial genre).

Many language functions are used in the communication of media or some kinds of literary works and one of literary works which has function of language is novel. In this study, the writer is interested in analyzing the language function in The Kite Runner. The writer focuses on the conversations between the main characters in this novel because this is considered into language function and the writer wants to know what type of language function used in the novel.

This novel is a best seller in the world in 2005; appear in New York by Khaled Hosseini. He was born in 1965 in Kabul, Afghanistan. This novel talks about the culture, love, and many problems in Afghanistan. The main characters in this novel are friendship and they have different mother with the same father, they are usually playing the kite in the area of village in Kabul. Their names are Hassan and Amir. Amir is diligent because he was studied in school but Hassan as a helper of Amir, but Amir thought that Hassan is his family not others. When they are playing the kite in their village, Amir is skilled at playing kite, beside Hassan is skilled at chasing the kite. However, their lives are very complicated because of the problems of life in their family. From this novel, the writer wants to know the language function used between the main characters in this novel, are Hassan and Amir.

This novel is interesting because it tells about the social life, Afghanistan culture, and teaches about the importance of friendship.

1.2 Problem of the Study

Related to the background stated before, the problem proposed in this study what are the types of language functions used by the main characters in The Kite Runner novel.

1.3 Objective of the Study

Based on the problem of study mentioned above, it can be stated that the objectives of this study is to identify the types of language function used by the main characters in The Kite Runner novel.

1.4 Definition of Key Terms

1. Discourse is language used for communication (Cook, 1989). Language used for communication to each other and express people feelings.

2. Discourse Analysis is the study of language used for communication that explains the quality of being coherent (Cook, 1994).

3. Language Function is function of language to communicate from the speaker to the hearer.

In this study: language function used in the dialogue of the main characters in The Kite Runner novel.

4. The Kite Runner is a 2005 first Afghanistan novel by Khaled Hosseini in English version, which tells about the life of Hassan and Amir, two friends who are from Afghanistan.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

In this chapter, the writer would like to review the related literature, the literatures are considered to be important sources concerning the topic being discussed.

2.1. Definition of Discourse

Viewed from linguistics, discourse could be understood as written or spoken language which has the quality of unity. McHoul (cited in Choyimah 2011, p.3) mentions that discourse refers to connected speech or writing occurring at supra-sentential levels in similar way. Cook (1989) defines discourse as language for communication that has the feeling of coherence and meaningfulness. On the basic of this concept, communication has interconnectedness, meaningfulness, and coherence among sentences. They are the main point of discourse regardless of the grammar accuracy. As such, a sentence could not be interpreted in isolation, but rather it should be viewed from a context. This is the meaning of supra-sentential level. The following excerpt is an example of discourse.

X: What time is it?

Y: "Top nine news" just started.

That conversation is not connected between the question and answer, and the utterance has the quality of unity from the meaning. The analyses are seen from the speaker, if the speaker comes from teacher means that he or she asks about the time of subject or courses. But if the speaker is a child who waits for the television's program, people will know the answer from whom the speaker is. Therefore, from these conversations we know about the importance of the meaning of the utterances. The analysis of language is necessary analyzed of discourse. Discourse analysis related with language used for communicating. The language which is used has function and meaning according from the context.

2.2 Discourse Analysis

Cook (1989) points out that discourse analysis is the search of what makes a discourse coherent. Brown and Yule (1996) state that discourse analysis is the study of how forms of language are used in communication. McHoul (cited in Choyimah 2011 p.5) mentions four characteristics of discourse analysis:

1. It criticizes the idea that whole languages are exclusively formal grammatical sentence systems by proposing to examine actual contexts of language in use.
2. It construes language as primarily discourses as heterogeneous social actions in the first place rather than as an innate property of the human mind which is merely put into social action of performance.
3. It considers language to be produced and analyzable only in terms of single sentences.
4. It favors naturally occurring data rather than elicited or invented data.

Discourse analysis examines how stretches of language, considered in their full textual, social, and psychological context, become meaningful and unified for its users. It is a rapidly expanding field, providing insights into the problems and processes of language used and language learning, which are important to language teachers. Traditionally, language teaching is concentrated on pronunciation, grammar, vocabulary, and while these remain the basic of foreign language knowledge, discourse analysis can draw attention to the skills needed to put this knowledge into action and to achieve successful communication.

Moreover Brown and Yule (1989, p.1) explain that discourse analysis is committed to an investigation of what and how language is used. It means that discourse analysis deals with language used for communication and how the addressee interprets the message.

In conclusion, we can say that discourse analysis talks about the language used for communication and the language function talks under the discourse analysis.

2.3 Language Function

Cook (1989, p.24) defines language function as the function which the sender of a message intends to achieve with it. Thus, we can simply determine language functions as a way in which we can use language to achieve communication purposes.

Roman Jakobson and Dell Hymes propose some function of language. Cook (1989) synthesizes their ideas. He points out that the function of language should be analyzed by firstly identifying the elements of communication, as follows:

Addresser/addressor : the person who creates the message.

Addressee : the person to whom the messages are addressed or sent.

Channel : the medium by which the message is sent, such as sound, telephone, paper, etc.

Message form : the particular grammatical and lexical choices of the message, such as change, we believe in.

Topic : the information carried out the message, such as a topic concerning uprising in Egypt, education policy in Indonesia, interfaith relation in Indonesia.

Code : the language or dialect used for carrying the messages, like English, Indonesian, etc.

Setting : when and where the communication takes places.

Jacobson (cited in Cook 1994, p. 39) supposed that language function is concerned with specifying to which class or types a given unit, such as word, text or image, belongs (like a textual or pictorial genre). Moreover, Jacobson distinguishes the function of language into six, are: (a) Emotive function; (b) Conative function; (c) Referential function; (d) Poetic function; (e) Phatic function; and (f) Metalingual function. The elaboration of the classification of the language function is explained:

a. Emotive Function

The emotive function focuses on the addresser. Its purposes for communicating the inner states and emotions of the addresser (direct expression of the speakers attitudes toward what he is speaking of), example: “oh, no!”, “fantastic” and “ugh”.

b. Conative Function

The orientation of conative function is the addressee. The aim of this function is seeking to affect others, whether the behavior, emotion, or even the feeling of the addressee, such as “please, help me!”, “stand up!”

c. Referential Function

The referential function means carrying information which is focused on the context. This function usually can be used to inform something such as report, description, statement, or confirm and explaining something. Example: “water boils at 100 degrees”.

d. Poetic Function

The poetic function is a particular form chosen to deliver a message. Its orientation is the message for its own sake and the sound must seem an echo to the sense. It can also be used to express something in different way using poetic words which plays with form of the text like rhyme, repetition, alliteration (repeat consonant), assonance (repeated vowels), and so on. Example: “no woman no cry”.

e. Phatic Function

The phatic function, which focuses on the contact, means opening the channel or checking that something is working, either for practical reasons or social ones to establish and maintain the channel of communication. Example: “do you hear me?”, “anybody home?”

f. Metalingual Function

The metalingual function used to establish mutual agreement on the code, such definition of something. It is sequence which is used to build an equivalence relation and it contains information about the lexical code. Example: “this bone is known as ‘femur’”.

Besides, Halliday (1973: p.23-41) classified language function seven types of language function, are:

1. Instrumental Function

The instrumental function serves to manipulate and control the environment, to cause certain events to happen as well as to satisfy material needs. It is a tool of getting things done which is known as the “I want function”, including “I do not want” as well (Halliday, 1992:11). For example: “I want mango” or “I do not want banana”.

2. Regulatory Function

The regulatory function is used to manage the behavior of others, to manipulate the person in the environment, which is known as “do as I tell you” function. It is a language of rule and instruction (Halliday, 1992: 12).

3. Representational Function

The representational function is the use of language to make statements and propositions, convey facts and knowledge, explain or report that is to present reality as one sees it. It conveys a message which has specific reference to the process, persons, objects, abstractions, qualities and relations of real world around the speaker (Halliday, 1992: 17). For example: “yesterday, I saw a small beautiful butterfly. Its colors were red, blue, yellow and green”.

4. Interactional Function

The interactional function server to ensure social maintenance, establish social contact and keep channels of communication open, the “me and you” function of language including “me and my mummy” (Halliday, 1992:13).

5. Personal Function

The personal function allows a speaker to express his own individuality (feelings, personality, and emotions) and is known as “here I come” function (Halliday, 1992: 17). For example: “I love my boy” or “I am happy”. A person’s individuality is usually characterized by his/her use of the personal function of communication.

6. Heuristic Function

The heuristic function refers to language as a means of investigating reality, way of learning about thing. Furthermore, it is often conveyed in the form of questions that will lead to answer, is known as “tell me why” function (Halliday, 1992: 17).

7. Imaginative Function

The imaginative function serves to create imaginary systems or ideas. Fairy tales, joking, writing a novel, poetry, tongue twisters, puns are all applications of the imaginative function (Halliday, 1992:15). For example, “The king of jungle has loud and frightening voice”.

Actually, we use a language function to approve and disapprove, to express belief, opinion and doubt, to include or exclude in the social group, to ask and answer, to express personal feeling, to achieve intimacy, to give and take.

From the explanation above, we know the based on that literary review there are two different perceptions of language function and different theories related to language function. The first is proposed by Jacobson and Hymes which cited in Cook theories, who classified the language function based on the elements of communication such as addresser/ addressor, addressee, channel, message form, topic, code, setting. According to their explanation, there are six types of language function; they are emotive function, conative function, referential function, poetic function, phatic function, metalingual function.

The second language function theory proposed by Halliday, he classified language function into seven types, they are instrumental function, regulatory function, representational function, interactional function, personal function, heuristic function, imaginative function.

However, the writer uses the theory of language function proposed by Jacobson and Hymes, because the theory is relevant with the object of research and influential theory of language function as stated by Cook (1994). It becomes a basic theory of language function. The theory is identified by elements of communication which explained before and this is more appropriate for this research by a conversation of novel.

2.4 The Kite Runner Novel

Published in 2003, Khaled Hosseini's The Kite Runner received generally positive reviews. The hardback edition sold respectably, if not spectacularly, and Hosseini received some recognition as a first-time novelist, winning the Stephen Crane First Fiction Award among other honors. Most critics considered The Kite Runner a powerful first novel, but little was expected from the trade paperback edition that was published a year later. However, following the trade paperback's publication, booksellers' and readers' enthusiasm increased dramatically, turning The Kite Runner into a national sensation.

Set in Afghanistan during the 1970's, 'The Kite Runner' is an insightful novel that spans three decades of the life and customs of a people and a country that have tragically become synonymous with terrorism. The story opens on an Afghanistan very few of us know or even care to remember; at a time when its streets and people were not ravaged by the mania of religious extremism and war; when it was a country of prosperity and liberal thought (Http://the kite runner/Book review).

Growing up in the midst of this is our narrator Amir with his odd family made up of his father Toghfan Aga, a bear-like man who is among the wealthiest and most respected public figure in Kabul. With them live their faithful servants, Ali and his young son Hassan, who have served the family for many generations as well as Toghfan Aga's business partner and closest friend, Rahim Khan.

Seen from the title that the kite is some old playing, but in Afghanistan, many children play the kite. Kite is famous in Afghanistan because if the spring season comes, many children in Afghanistan play the kite and one of the main characters in this novel is very skilled in playing the kite and touchdown and looking for the kite of others. Their names are Amir and Hassan, they are family from one father but only Amir who has a good life, Hassan comes from Hazara's family, and it means a servant's family from his mother. Father of Amir named Baba once married with Hassan's mother but nobody knows about this problem. Baba is a famous person in Kabul, he wants Amir to be a stronger man and to be a good person but Amir does not want to be like that. In the real story of this novel, Amir is a weak in action but Hassan always supports Amir for a good life. Someday Amir and Hassan had the enemy when they are child.

After being adult they are separated to other country until each of them has the family because Afghanistan has more complicated problems of culture and the government.

2.5 Previous Study

There are two previous studies that are considered by the writer. The first is the thesis entitled "A Study of Language Function Used by The Caretakers of Autistic Children in Miracle Run Film" by Agwin Degaf (2010) from The State Islamic University. This study analyzed the phenomena of talk in interaction. The data are collected from the language used by the caretakers, they are mother, doctor, teacher and therapist when talk to the autistic children and those are analyzed by using M.A.K Halliday theory on language function. The result of this study shows that there are several language functions in talking to autistic child in miracle run film they are instrumental function, regulatory function, representational function, interactional function, personal function, heuristic function and imaginative function. The regulatory function is the most dominant kind of language function, he used twenty three utterances for this research, and this study only analyzed the kinds and implementation about effective of language function.

The second is a thesis from University of Brawijaya entitled “An Analysis of Language Functions Used by the Main Characters in Laskar Pelangi Movie” by Vivi Mayasari (2011). The choice of language functions is important in a movie in order to deliver the message of the movie to the viewers. She conducted a study about language functions that are used in Laskar Pelangi movie. This study aim at examining: (1) the kind of language functions used in Laskar Pelangi movie and (2) the implementation of language functions used in Laskar Pelangi movie. This study used the theory by Cook (1989) that six out of seven language functions used in Laskar Pelangi movie. They are referential function, phatic function, emotive function, directive function, poetic function, and metalinguistic function. From those six language functions, referential function (the function of language to deliver information) is the most commonly used in this movie. The language functions used in Laskar Pelangi movie can be implemented both in formal and informal situation. Most of them are implemented in informal situation by using informal language. The implementation of language functions in this movie is affective to deliver the message from the speakers to the hearers because the messages are clearly stated and understandable.

From those two previous studies mentioned above, the writer gets some knowledge about language functions from different theories. They found much information from language functions used in their data such as in a film. Compared to those studies above, this study was intended to find language function in novel which has many characters but the writer only used language function in the speaker between two main characters, because from the novel we know about much information such as culture from the utterances which is used in their dialogues. The first theory is M.A.K Halliday's theory which has seven types of language function and the data from film and the second used Cook theory.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

This chapter discusses about the research method to answer the problems of the study. The discussion includes research design, data source, data collection, and data analysis.

3.1 Type of Research

This study was qualitative since the data collected are in the form of words. The type of the study was about language function of the conversation between the main characters in The Kite Runner novel. The qualitative research attempts to arrive at rich descriptions of the people, objects, events, places, conversations and so on. Ary, et al, (2002) calls textual analysis as content or documentary analysis. Content or documentary analysis is a research method applied in written or visual materials for the purpose of identifying specified characteristics of the material. Ary (2002) says that the material analyzed can be textbooks, newspapers, speeches, television programs, advertisements, musical compositions, or any of host of other types of documents.

The text is anything written, visual, or spoken that serves as a medium for communication such as newspaper or magazine articles, advertisements, speeches, official documents, films, or videotapes, musical lyrics, photographs and etc (Nadia, 2010:22).

3.2 Data source

The data source was taken from The Kite Runner novel from English language novel version written by Khaled Hussein who comes from Kabul, Afghanistan. The data for this study were the dialogues of main characters in The Kite Runner Novel.

3.3 Data Collection

Since this research is qualitative, the writer collected the data by using analysis the data of The Kite Runner novel. Ary, et al, (2002: p.29) state that qualitative research use a wide variety of instruments to gather data, including texts, questionnaire, ratings, attitudes scales and so on. Qualitative researchers also have a toolbox of data-gathering techniques, including in-depth interviewing, participant observation and document analysis. The writer designs some steps to collect data as follows:

1. Reading The Kite Runner novel.
2. Selecting the dialogue of the main characters in the novel from chapter 2 till chapter 8.

4. Drawing conclusion of the analysis based on their types.

CHAPTER IV

FINDING AND DISCUSSION

This chapter discusses the finding and discussion of the study. The finding includes the analysis of the data. The purpose of analysis is to answer the research problem. Then the purpose of discussion is to discuss the results of the data analysis.

4.1 Finding

In the finding of the data, the writer categorized the entire main characters dialogues in The Kite Runner Novel. Each dialog was taken from the chapter 2 till chapter 8 of the novel. The writer found 125 (one hundred twenty five) utterances, which were divided in to four kinds of language functions, they were emotive 17 (seventeen) utterances, conative 22 (twenty two) utterances, referential 45 (forty five) utterances; the last is phatic 48 (forty eight) utterances.

The writer analyzed the language function used in the utterances of the main characters in The Kite Runner novel based on Jakobson's theory, which has six kinds of language function, they are emotive, conative, referential, poetic, phatic, metalingual. But, the writer only found four language functions in utterances by main characters are emotive, conative, referential and phatic. The writer categorized the language function used in the utterances.

4.1.1 Emotive Function

The emotive function focuses on the addresser. Its purposes for communicating the inner states and emotions of the addresser (direct expression of the speakers' attitudes toward what he is speaking of) (Jacobson, cited in Cook 1994, p. 39).

In The Kite Runner novel, the main characters Hassan and Amir are family in Afghanistan. They are together in many situations. Amir is an educated child but Hassan is uneducated. Amir always make story for Hassan that Hassan does not understand with the difficulty of Amir's story but Hassan always give the support and show the happy expression by their conversation. Hassan can make Amir happy in any ways.

The writer analyzed the kinds of emotive utterances by main characters in The Kite Runner novel are:

1. Chapter 4: "Aaah"

The addresser (Hassan) showed his feeling to addressee (Amir) of being shy because Amir was giving praise for Hassan by the word which Hassan didn't know before.

2. Chapter 4: "Really"

It showed direct expression from the addresser (Amir) toward what was addressee (Hassan) said about the praise of his history. Here, Amir happily found that actually his best friend was Hassan.

3. Chapter 4: "Really"

43. Chapter 7: "Where were you? I looked for you,"

Here, addresser (Amir) talked and asked to addressee (Hassan) where he when, but Amir was knowing about what happened before and Hassan was not saying anything and he felt sick after Assef did it to him.

44. Chapter 8: “What is it?”

The addresser (Amir) asked to addressee (Hassan) for opening the communication after the dark life of Hassan. Here, Hassan kept trying to rekindle things between them. Hassan tried to knock the door of Amir’s room for saying something to go and play together.

45. Chapter 8: “What would you do if I hit you with this?”

From the question above the addresser (Amir) asked to addressee (Hassan) about what he did if Amir hurled the fruit to Hassan, and Hassan only smiled with an empty feeling in his mind. Amir and Hassan climbed the tree for picking a dozen pomegranates, than Amir asked the question above. Every day after bad things happened to Hassan, Amir had guilty feeling because Amir was not doing anything when Hassan gave the violent from Assef (Amir and Hassan’s friend).

46. Chapter 8: “What would you do?”

Here, the addresser (Amir) gave the stressed question to addressee (Hassan) for saying anything or doing anything if Amir did that to Hassan.

47. Chapter 8: “Are you satisfied? Do you feel better?”

Here addresser (Hassan) asked to addressee (Amir) after what Amir did to Hassan by hurled the pomegranate to him but Hassan just stood there looked dazed and tried to open it and crush it into his own forehead and asked to Amir for his satisfaction.

48. Chapter 8: “What am I going to do with you, Hassan? What am I going to do with you?”

The addresser (Amir) felt annoying with his attitude after knowing what Assef (friends of Amir and Hassan) did before to Hassan at the blind end of the alley in a defiant stance. In the novel, we knew what happened in the dark life of Hassan is uncommunicated to other.

4.2 Discussion

After having the analysis above, the writer would like to discuss based on the analysis.

There are four language functions found. They were emotive, conative, referential, phatic function. The finding showed much information in the dialogues between the main characters in The Kite Runner novel.

This novel has two main characters, they are Hassan and Amir. They are the children of Kabul, Afghanistan who have many characters. Hassan is uneducated and Amir is smart for writing many stories and reading many books. They are smart in playing kites and catching the kite when it is cut. So, when they are giving praises of it the analysis in an emotive function.

Winter season in Afghanistan has the tournament of playing and chasing the kite. Hassan is really skilled in chasing the kite and Amir is skilled in playing kite.

The conative function is also used when Hassan and Amir Utterances are demanding an action, suggestion and requesting that focuses on the addressee, like Hassan said “trust me” to Amir when he looked at the kite. The referential function also used in this analysis for giving many information and the last function is phatic function is used on this novel to analyze the main characters, when they are holding social relationship to communicate, like “what does the word mean?” here, Hassan is opening the channel to Amir for asking the information that Hassan did not know the meaning of “imbecile”.

In addition, the writer did not find the poetic function and metalingual function in this novel because from the poetic function that focuses on the message like slogans, from this dialog talked many things about the friendship, life and culture, so the writer did not found the poetic function in this novel and metalingual refers to the nature of linguistic procedures means that establish mutual agreement on the code, such definition of something.

There are two previous studies that are considered by the writer. The first is the thesis entitled “A Study of Language Function Used by The Caretakers of Autistic Children in Miracle Run Film” by Agwin Degaf (2010) from The State Islamic University. From this analysis, there are many language functions found in this film, they are instrumental, regulatory, representational, interactional, personal, heuristic, and imaginative. This study used M.A.K Halliday’s theories for the analysis, and the most dominant kind of language function is regulatory because in this film the writer analyzed phenomena of talk in interaction between the caretakers (mother, doctor, teachers, and therapist) and the autistics children, from this dominantly kind of language function found of this thesis because regulatory means that use language to control between them and this research found twenty three utterances. The second is a thesis from Brawijaya University student entitled “An Analysis of Language Functions Used by the Main Characters in Laskar Pelangi Movie” by Vivi Mayasari (2011). This study used the theory by Cook (1989) that six out of seven language functions are used in Laskar Pelangi movie. They are referential function, phatic function, emotive function, directive function, poetic function, and metalinguistic function. From those six language functions, referential function (the function of language to deliver information) is the most commonly used in this movie because from the movie it talks about the life of students in the back of country that did not know many things in the city.

From those previous studies, the writer got the conclusion of this study that differences between their studies are the data and the theories from first and second studies. The writer used for analyzed this novel by Jacobson's theory. That six out of language functions, they are referential function, phatic function, emotive function, directive function, poetic function, and metalinguistic function. Referential function is effectively used in 45 (forty five) utterances, phatic function effectively used in 48 (forty eight) utterances, conative function is effectively used in 22 (twenty two) utterances, and emotive function is effectively used in 17 (seventeen) utterances. In this novel the dominantly used of language function is phatic function, when the main characters in this novel have the different characters and social status, Hassan is more enthusiastic for asking many things to Amir because he was uneducated but Amir was educated child in Kabul, Afghanistan.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter presents conclusion dealing with the results of the study discussed in the previous chapters. This part is also contributing the suggestion that can be used to gain better insight, particularly for further researchers and the English Department Students.

5.1 Conclusion

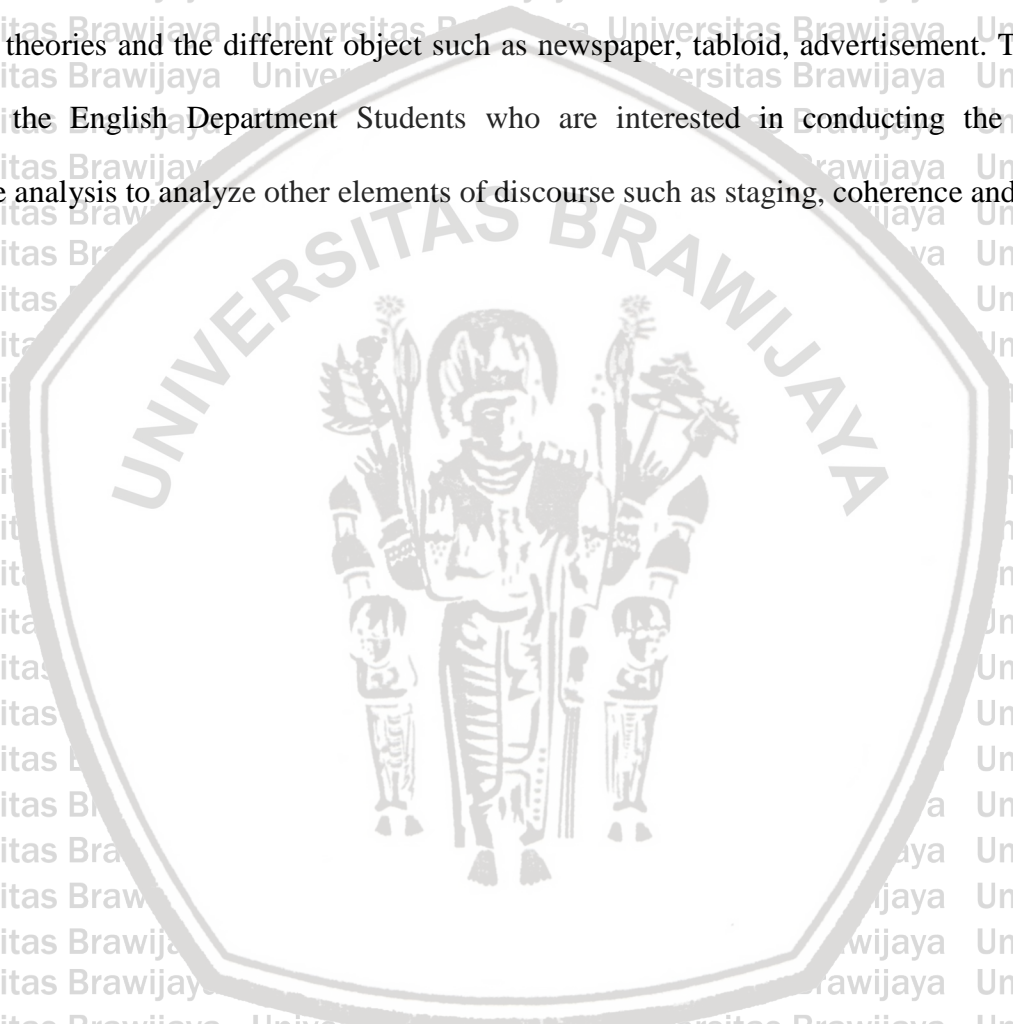

The Kite Runner novel tells a story about Afghanistan life, culture, economics and condition in this era. This novel shows that the children picture of Afghanistan has differences of Taliban ethnic and Hazara. The utterances are give more functions of language that the writer analyzed by Jacobson's theory, they are emotive function, referential function, conative function, phatic function, poetic function and metalingual function.

Based on the analysis in the previous chapter, the writer can conclude that only four out of language functions found in this novel, they are emotive function, referential function, conative function and phatic function. Referential function is effectively used in 45 (forty five) utterances, phatic function effectively used in 48 (forty eight) utterances, conative function is effectively used in 22 (twenty two) utterances, and emotive function is effectively used in 17 (seventeen) utterances. The most dominantly a kind of language function is phatic function which focuses on the contact.

5.2 Suggestion

The writer hopes that this study can contribute a better and deeper understanding on how language function is used for different purposes and object of conversation in daily life.

Therefore, some suggestions are needed to make it better. First, the writer would like to suggest the future researcher to use this study for references and finding language function in the different theories and the different object such as newspaper, tabloid, advertisement. The writer suggests the English Department Students who are interested in conducting the study in discourse analysis to analyze other elements of discourse such as staging, coherence and others.

78	Chapter 7	Hassan	We were at Ghargha lake, You, Me, Father, Agha sahib, Rahim khan, and thousands of other people, it was warm and sunny, and the lake was clear like a mirror. But no one was swimming because they said a monster had come to the lake. It was swimming at the bottom, waiting.			v
79		Hassan	So everyone is scared to get in the water, and suddenly you kick off your shoes, amir agha, and take off your shirt. There's no more monster, you say. I'll show you all. 80		Hassan	It's a dream Amir agha, you can do anything. Anyway, everyone is screaming. "get out! Get out!" but we just swim in the cold water. We make it way out to the middle of the lake and we stop swimming. We turn toward the shore and wave to the people. They took small like ants, but we can hear them clapping. They see now. There is no monster, just water. They change the name of the lake after that, and call it the "lake of Amir and Hassan, Sultans of Kabul" and we got to charge people money for swimming in it.			v
81		Amir	So what does it means?					v
